How Gold Coast residents can reclaim missing super

Queensland superannuation fund, LGIASuper is encouraging Gold Coast residents to take stock of their super, after the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) revealed that residents within the region could reclaim more than $212,095,697 in lost and unclaimed superannuation in their local area*.

LGIASuper Chief Executive Officer Kate Farrar said she was pleased to see that the overall amount of lost and unclaimed super throughout Queensland had reduced but found the amount of misplaced super within the Gold Coast region to be substantial.

“Checking your superannuation is not everyone’s top priority, especially for those a long way from retirement, but staying connected to your super is important for your future,” Ms Farrar said.

“If you have changed your name, contact details, or even your career you may have unintentionally lost track of some of your superannuation. Locating lost and unclaimed super is now more important than ever, so I encourage everyone to treat this as a check-in opportunity to take stock of your super.”

LGIASuper has online tools to help members find misplaced super at www.lgiasuper.com.au. You can also find, manage and reclaim your super using the ATO’s online services.

Later this month LGIASuper is hosting a seminar to help Gold Coast residents better prepare for retirement.
